

Stacie & Jeffrey

STURBRIDGE, MASSACHUSETTS
 SEPTEMBER 19, 2008
 BY PHOEBE BRUECKNER

When Stacie first saw Jeff in their freshman year dorm she thought he was the cutest, sweetest guy she'd ever met. Therefore, she decided to take the initiative, and after a month of being friends, asked to kiss him. Jeff responded that she absolutely could and "that was it," Stacie says, "we never thought of being with anybody but each other." The fact that they would get married after graduation was an unspoken understanding, according to Stacie, "we just knew." So she went ahead and booked a date for their wedding at the Publick House in Sturbridge, Massachusetts two months before they officially became engaged. "It was an act of faith," Stacie says, "because we had no idea how we were going to pay for everything."

Indeed, financial constraints were the biggest obstacle the couple faced in planning their wedding. But their prayers were answered, Stacie says, and amazing things started falling into place. It began when they discovered that they were the winners of a contest they had entered for a free wedding package from Troy Photography. Next they found out that, as the winners of that contest, they would also receive free flowers from Jessica's Country Flowers. In addition to that, Jessica offered to supply them with invitations and place cards (which were beautifully handwritten by Jeff's mother), as well as the favor bags for out of town guests. She then took it upon herself to find Kelly of Kelly's Sweet Rewards to contribute a free chocolate ganache and peanut butter mousse cake. Burdick Chocolate provided the couple with their wedding favors: gold boxes filled with five samples of their chocolates, and finally, Troy photography found a videographer also willing to donate their services. Clearly, the wedding was meant to be.

On Friday, September 19, Jeff and Stacie had a traditional Christian ceremony by the gazebo at the Publick House. Stacie walked down the aisle with her father and stepfather in a strapless satin mermaid gown from David's Bridal. Her bridal party also wore dresses from David's, the maid and matron of honor wore fuchsia while the four bridesmaids wore the same Impressions dress in eggplant. The two junior bridesmaids wore lilac dresses, altogether complementing the colors in the elegant bouquet. Jessica's final surprise Stacie & Jeffrey's wedding day story highlighted in LaBella Bride Magazine—one of our clients.

"Rob was amazing. The guests kept raving about how awesome the mix of music was what a great time they had. Rob was also extremely flexible, we had some last minute changes at the ceremony, and he was willing to work around them and was super accommodating."

Stacie & Jeff

Oct 2009—Publick House, Sturbridge, MA

That was it. We never thought of being with anybody but each other.

Stacie and Jeff was that she found a collar and veil to play at their ceremony. "She did so much more than she had to," Stacie says of Jessica. "It was an amazing gift and I don't really know how to describe it."

After the ceremony, the DJ fulfilled Stacie's request to hear Coldplay's Viva La Vida as guests moved on to the cocktail party, which took place in the barn area. Afterwards, the party moved inside the Publick House for the reception. Guests were served spinach soufflé and cranberry-walnut salad, and then feasted on mass native turkey with cornbread and sausage stuffing on prime ribs with a paprika. The DJ played and the guests danced merrily. Looking back on it, Stacie reflects that the whole day was "pretty much a dream come true. I can't say in words what it was like."

- FLOWERS
 Jessica's Country Flowers
www.jessicascountryflowers.com
- PHOTOGRAPHER
 Troy Photography
www.troyphotography.com
- RECEPTION
 The Publick House
www.publickhouse.com
- CAKE DESIGNER
 Kelly's Sweet Rewards
www.kellysweetsrewards.com
- FAVORS
 Burdick Chocolates
www.burdickchocolates.com
- GROOM'S ATTIRE
 The Men's Warehouse
www.mens.com